

Electrical Supplies
EVEREADY FLASHLIGHTS
The new focusing spotlight is making a big hit with the Xmas trade. Dealers who have not stocked up should phone us for prices and catalogue today.

Parr
ELECTRIC COMPANY
Wholesale Distributors of Everything Electrical
77 WARREN ST., NEW YORK
Phone Barclay 632

The Putnam Bookstore
2nd 45th St. 5th Ave. N.Y.
For Christmas
Books
Easiest to choose
Bring lasting pleasure
During December, store hours from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Rebuilt Cars
Eight
Cylinder
Peerless
FACTORY GUARANTEED
TOURING $800
40 exceptional bargains.
Inspect them today.
PEERLESS, B'way, at 63d St.
OPEN EVERY NIGHT

DANDERINE
Stops Hair Coming Out;
Thickens, Beautifies.

25 cents buys a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store. After one application you can not find a particle of dandruff or a falling hair. Besides, your hair shows new life, vigor, brightness, more color and abundance.

USE SLOAN'S TO WARD OFF PAIN

LITTLE aches grow into big pains unless ward off by an application of Sloan's. Don't rub, as it penetrates. A counter-irritant, Sloan's scatters congestion, and soon relieves the ache and pain. Rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, lame back, stiff joints, sprains and strains won't fight long against Sloan's Liniment. Always keep it handy for instant use. For more than forty years, Sloan's Liniment has helped thousands the world over. You won't be an exception. It certainly does produce results. You just know from its stimulating, healthy odor that it will do you good. Ask your neighbor.

At all druggists—35c, 70c, $1.40.

Sloan's Liniment (Painted money)
Makes Sick Skins Well
One of Dr. Hobson's Family Remedies. For a clear, healthy complexion use freely
Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment

Cuticura
Is so soothing and cooling for baby's tender skin after a bath with Cuticura Soap.
Sample Pack Free by Mail. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. 170, Malden, Mass." Sold everywhere. See the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Soap Shaves without soap.

An advertisement in the Lost and Found columns of THE NEW YORK HERALD offers a real possibility of recovering your lost property.

DR. LORENZ LAUDED BY THE ROTARIANS

Story of His Coming Here to Help Repay Austria's Debt Rouses Enthusiasm.

TO CONTINUE HIS CLINICS

Bloodless Operation on Knee Is Performed on Pittsburgh Girl.

Dr. Adolf Lorenz, speaking last night at the monthly dinner of the Rotary Club at the Hotel McAlpin, said that despite the discouragement he has encountered from certain quarters, he still hoped "the American medical profession would take the lead in restoring international amity by shaking hands with their Viennese colleagues."

The members of the Rotary Club cheered Dr. Lorenz as he told of the impetus that moved him to come to America in the hope that he might help crippled children and repay in part the debt the people of Vienna feel they owe on account of American charity since the war.

Dr. Lorenz will hold a clinic at 10 o'clock this morning at the Department of Health Building, 505 Pearl street, for those who already have made appointments to be examined. Dr. Royal L. Copeland, Health Commissioner, said that only patients who have registered will be permitted at the clinic. Other clinics possibly will be held at the Health Department Building, however, and registration for them may be made by application to Dr. Jacob Sobel, assistant director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene.

A "bloodless operation" was performed by Dr. Lorenz yesterday morning on Marian Le Roy, daughter of Dr. M. H. Le Roy of Pittsburgh. The girl, who is 15 years old, has been suffering from a deformity of the knees known as intra-articular redness. The correction of deformity was accomplished by stretching the ligaments without cutting. The operation was performed at St. Mark's Hospital, where Dr. Lorenz will hold a clinic next Saturday.

In the afternoon Dr. Lorenz examined two private patients at the office of Dr. Dexter D. Ashley, 246 Lexington avenue. Dr. Ashley was one of Dr. Lorenz's assistants when the Viennese specialist was here eighteen years ago.

Anton Weil, of 105 East Fifteenth street, friend of Dr. Lorenz, has had printed 1,000 blue cards entitling the bearers to the clinics at St. Mark's Hospital and 1,000 red cards for admission to the clinics at the Hospital for Joint Diseases. It is thought the cards will do away with much of the confusion that disturbed the clinics last week.

R. Kendrick Smith, director of the department of public education of the American Osteopathic Association, announced in Boston yesterday that the association had invited Dr. Lorenz to make a tour of the United States at its expense. Dr. Lorenz said he was not prepared to say what he would do about the offer. Mr. Smith said that osteopathic hospitals all over the country would be open to Dr. Lorenz.

LA GUARDIA ANNOUNCES HIS MILK COMMITTEE
Will Inquire Into Various Aspects of the Strike.

Authorized to do so under his own resolution, Alderman President La Guardia yesterday called the following committee to investigate the milk strike: Aldermen William T. Collins, C. H. Haubert, John J. O'Rourke, Jacob W. Friedman, Louis Zeitner and B. Charney Vladek. The latter five are members of the committee.

It was outrageous, said Mr. La Guardia, who is to act as chairman, that milk should be kept from the people of the City of New York because of a dispute between private employers and employees over the right to organize. Employees have as much right to organize as employers, and one of the reasons for unemployment was that employers wanted to starve employees into submission. He objected, he added, to the police acting as distributors for the milk companies.

The committee, which was directed to report to the Board of Aldermen within two weeks, will go into the cost of production and distribution of milk.

ANCELL BALL A CAPTAIN IN DAWES'S BIG ARMY
Head of Specialty Stores Division of Budget Guard.

Ansell H. Ball, president of Best & Co., and vice-president of the Fifth Avenue Association, has been appointed head of the department and specialty stores division of the Budget Guard, which is being organized in New York by the National Budget Committee under the direction of Sam A. Lewisohn, chairman for the city. The purpose is to gain popular support for the work that Charles G. Dawes, head of the National Budget, is trying to do.

Mr. Ball said that the Government has been reckless in expenditures that nothing short of a proper budget can bring the United States back to its proper place in the expenditure of public moneys. It is not asking too much, Mr. Ball said, to urge the public to get behind Mr. Dawes and endeavor to make his work successful.

WHO CALLED PATRIOTS PIRATES? ASKS Hylan

Inquiry Will Decide if Schools Teach Anti-Americanism.

Mayor Hylan yesterday directed Commissioner of Accounts Hirschfeld to investigate and report to him "with regard to the new history readers and textbooks, alleged to contain anti-American propaganda, which have been introduced into the public schools of this city."

"It would be interesting to learn," he wrote, "why the standard works have been supplanted, if such is the fact, who are the authors of the new books and what influence is back of the change."

"It is amazing to think that any publication, intended for the use of school children, should refer to our early patriots as 'hot headed mobs,' 'smugglers' and 'pirates.'"

HELD IN BANKRUPTCY CHARGE.

Morris Hirschfeld, a jobber in cottons and silks at 215 Fourth avenue, who went into bankruptcy on October 11, and Jacob Lerner, 612 Broadway, and Charles G. Rider were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Hitchcock charged with conspiracy to cancel assets from a trustee.

According to charges brought by Abraham Solomon, Assistant United States Attorney, Hirschfeld divided his stock among the other defendants with the intent to hinder and defraud the creditors. The men were held pending a hearing in bonds of $2,500 each.

Carload of Holly Here, Real Berries Scarce

THE first full carload of holly arrived yesterday and went on sale at public markets at $6.50 to $7 for a large box. Reports from the railroads were that approximately fifteen cars of Christmas trees arrived in the day, and some sales were reported at $1.25 to $2 a bundle of two to six trees. The supply is expected to be large. Holly branches being practically devoid of real berries this season, artificial berries have been sent South to be attached to the sprigs before shipment. One artificial flower manufacturer, according to a report of the State Department of Farms and Markets, sent a $2,000 shipment of holly berries to South Carolina to be fitted on there.

PACKERS PROTECTED IN SOUTH ST. PAUL

Troops Called Out Following Attempt to Bring Workers to Plants.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6 (Associated Press).—Violence marked the second day of the strike of packing house workers in several cities of the middle West and resulted in the calling out of National Guard troops to-night to patrol the packing plant district in South St. Paul. Police with drawn revolvers held a crowd of 100 persons at bay here today until reserves arrived, after arresting strike sympathizers said to have beaten a workman as he boarded a street car. A man and his daughter, packing plant employees, were twice attacked by strike sympathizers as they started to leave a packing plant, and several arrests were made for minor disturbances.

The calling out of troops at South St. Paul followed attempts of the packing companies to bring workers to the plants to take the place of the strikers, labor leaders refusing to discontinue the picketing.

While little violence was reported at Kansas City, Kan., the district leader of the union men in an address defied the Kansas Court of Industrial Relations to stop the strike, asserting that he would rather go to jail than give up.

MRS. KRAFT DIVORCED FROM TANNERY OWNER

Decree for Bronxville Man Revealed in White Plains.

William Dinsmore Kraft of Bronxville secured a divorce from Mrs. Louise Forbach Kraft on November 21. It was revealed yesterday in White Plains. An order by Justice Morchauer in Supreme Court was a confirmation of the report of Surrogate William A. Slater, who heard testimony as referee.

Mr. Kraft is one of the largest stockholders in the Big Leather Tannery at Bronxville, which was founded by his grandfather. Mrs. Kraft is accused of misconduct with a man named Webster in his apartment in West Fifty-fifth street in March of this year. She did not oppose the decree.

BELIEVES BODY IS THAT OF WIFE WHO LEFT HIM

Vermont Man Sends Letter to Long Island City Police.

The police of the Hunters Point station in Long Island City received a letter yesterday from Ludwig Suta of Bennington, Vt., in which Suta said he believed the body of a woman found on October 22 at Queens Boulevard and Rawson street, Long Island City, might be that of his wife.

Suta said his wife left him on July 10. He believed the body might be that of his wife because the newspaper descriptions of the body tallied with those of his wife. Detectives began trying to trace the movements of Mrs. Suta from the time she left her home but have not yet made any progress.

MERIDEN GOES DEMOCRATIC.

MERIDEN, Conn., Dec. 6.—At the biennial city election held here to-day Judge Henry T. King, Democrat, was elected over Lloyd E. Jennings, Republican, by 871 votes.

STUICURE CURES BLINDNESS.

TELETON, Dec. 6.—(Preferred) death to blindness, Jacob Kacior, 56, of 450 Lamberton street, plunged into the Delaware and Raritan Canal here to-day and was drowned. Kacior was forced to stop work four months ago because of his poor sight.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

Copyright, 1921, by THE NEW YORK HERALD.

Paris, Dec. 6.

Premier Briand succeeded to-day in saving off any interference, both in the Chamber of Deputies and in the Senate, with the programme of the Washington conference, and secured votes of confidence conditioned upon his promise to accord an open debate in what the conference meant to France.

Interpellations in both branches of Parliament were designed as traps and might have led to the fall of the Ministry, but Mr. Briand, with his usual facility whenever Washington was mentioned, called attention to the fact that nothing had been decided there and, therefore, he had nothing to add to the discussion which have been credited in France's favor on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the Chamber of Deputies Premier Briand obtained an adjournment of such discussions until, probably, January, by a vote of 469 to 109, with fifty members not voting. In the Senate, however, where opposition is developing owing to Raymond Poincaré's maneuvers against the Briand Government's intentions regarding Angora and budget problems, the Premier found a decided coolness, which he met by boldly defending his established policy of strict accord with France's allies, calling for better support from all parties in order that France might be able to enforce the treaty, which, "in general terms, makes all Germany's guaranty that the reparations will be paid." He got a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, excepting the Washington conference, of 249 to 12.

The Premier commented briefly on the Washington conference, declaring he had gone there chiefly to attest to France's gratitude, and added that after he had explained in a country flooded with anti-French propaganda the truth about France even German-Americans admitted they would support the French. He said that in the event of further German aggression, he would be recognized at Washington that France is not an imperialistic nation, and that a comparatively large army is but a question of security. He said that while some American business men expressed the opinion that large cash payments by Germany would be injurious to the world's finance, none believed that France should stand ruined in the face of an enriched Germany.

Premier Briand called attention to the necessity for solidarity within the country if France was not to give the impression she did not know what she wanted from Germany, but added: "Our allies, however, must be prepared to adapt their special interests to our special preoccupations in arranging Germany's payment." He insisted the Reparation Commission was convinced that if Germany declares a failure it will be merely a fraudulent bankruptcy which the German people would be able to overcome by greater taxation effort, increased production and solid effort to prove their good faith.

The Premier closed his speech with an eloquent appeal to his critics to aid with advice instead of always trying destructive tactics, but, while his remarks were received with much applause, keen students of French politics are commenting on the fact that Briand since his American trip appears to be exceptionally tired, and they are prophesying that if the Chamber debates and the issues raised by the statement by Lord Curzon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the French Government's policy in the Near East become too bitter the Premier will abandon his post rather than carry on a fight against his opponents' pin pricks.

ARMED POSTPONED

Deputies Support Him on Rest of Foreign Policy.

460 to 100.

SENATE AGREES, 249 TO 12

Premier Calls for Accord With Allies to Enforce the Treaty.

Interpellations in both branches of Parliament were designed as traps and might have led to the fall of the Ministry, but Mr. Briand, with his usual facility whenever Washington was mentioned, called attention to the fact that nothing had been decided there and, therefore, he had nothing to add to the discussion which have been credited in France's favor on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the Chamber of Deputies Premier Briand obtained an adjournment of such discussions until, probably, January, by a vote of 469 to 109, with fifty members not voting. In the Senate, however, where opposition is developing owing to Raymond Poincaré's maneuvers against the Briand Government's intentions regarding Angora and budget problems, the Premier found a decided coolness, which he met by boldly defending his established policy of strict accord with France's allies, calling for better support from all parties in order that France might be able to enforce the treaty, which, "in general terms, makes all Germany's guaranty that the reparations will be paid." He got a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, excepting the Washington conference, of 249 to 12.

The Premier commented briefly on the Washington conference, declaring he had gone there chiefly to attest to France's gratitude, and added that after he had explained in a country flooded with anti-French propaganda the truth about France even German-Americans admitted they would support the French. He said that in the event of further German aggression, he would be recognized at Washington that France is not an imperialistic nation, and that a comparatively large army is but a question of security. He said that while some American business men expressed the opinion that large cash payments by Germany would be injurious to the world's finance, none believed that France should stand ruined in the face of an enriched Germany.

Premier Briand called attention to the necessity for solidarity within the country if France was not to give the impression she did not know what she wanted from Germany, but added: "Our allies, however, must be prepared to adapt their special interests to our special preoccupations in arranging Germany's payment." He insisted the Reparation Commission was convinced that if Germany declares a failure it will be merely a fraudulent bankruptcy which the German people would be able to overcome by greater taxation effort, increased production and solid effort to prove their good faith.

The Premier closed his speech with an eloquent appeal to his critics to aid with advice instead of always trying destructive tactics, but, while his remarks were received with much applause, keen students of French politics are commenting on the fact that Briand since his American trip appears to be exceptionally tired, and they are prophesying that if the Chamber debates and the issues raised by the statement by Lord Curzon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the French Government's policy in the Near East become too bitter the Premier will abandon his post rather than carry on a fight against his opponents' pin pricks.

POWER COMPANIES

FIGHT FORD PROJECT

Aluminum Trust Also Reported Opposed to His Muscle Shoals Offer.

RISE OF WAGES FEARED

Believed His Plan May Result in Big Battle in Congress.

POWER COMPANIES FIGHT FORD PROJECT

Aluminum Trust Also Reported Opposed to His Muscle Shoals Offer.

RISE OF WAGES FEARED

Believed His Plan May Result in Big Battle in Congress.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. FLORENCE, Ala., Dec. 6.—Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison and Edsel Ford, who have been here since Saturday inspecting the Muscle Shoals Water Power Development, which Mr. Ford has offered to lease from the Government, are due to arrive in Dearborn, Mich., late to-night.

The purpose of the trip was to give to Mr. Edison an opportunity to see the great power and chemical works in detail so that he may assist Mr. Ford with a report which the latter will forward to Secretary of War Weeks next week. Mr. Edison's work has to do with the chemical end of the project.

No detail of the original Ford offer for the property will be changed. It stands as filed. After the Secretary of War receives the report, the next step will be the submission of the Ford offer to Congress, with or without recommendation.

This probably will be early in January. From then on the question of whether or not the Ford interests will take over the greatest water power project on the North American continent is a matter to be settled on the floor of the national legislature.

If the report of the offer to Congress carries with it the recommendation of the Secretary of War that it be accepted, there seems to be little question that Congress will readily grant the lease.

Ever since Mr. Ford's offer apprised the country that he was interested in the project powerful interests have exerted every effort to thwart acceptance of his offer. The power companies of this section of the South see in Mr. Ford's acquisition of Muscle Shoals a certain reduction of their rates. Near here are great areas of land containing bauxite, from which aluminum is made, and with Mr. Ford a possible producer of aluminum in great quantities, the aluminum trust is strongly opposed to Mr. Ford's advent in the South. The Southern manufacturers fear that if Mr. Ford comes to Muscle Shoals it will mean a general rise in wages throughout the South.

The railroads north and south from the Gulf to the Ohio River have long enjoyed rates denounced as outrageously high. With Mr. Ford at Muscle Shoals the level of the waters of the Tennessee River will be raised sufficiently to carry boats of no mean burden. Mr. Ford has repeatedly stated that he will do everything in his power to develop water carriage of freight; hence he has the hearty and unstinted opposition of the railroads. And these are but a few of the interests powerful at Washington which are seeking by every means possible to keep the power site from him.

"I don't care what the railroads and others interpose do," said Mr. Ford. "Why should I? From what I've seen down here I believe that the people of the South—especially the working and professional people—are with me."

MERIDEN GOES DEMOCRATIC. MERIDEN, Conn., Dec. 6.—At the biennial city election held here to-day Judge Henry T. King, Democrat, was elected over Lloyd E. Jennings, Republican, by 871 votes.

STUICURE CURES BLINDNESS. TELETON, Dec. 6.—(Preferred) death to blindness, Jacob Kacior, 56, of 450 Lamberton street, plunged into the Delaware and Raritan Canal here to-day and was drowned. Kacior was forced to stop work four months ago because of his poor sight.

ARMED POSTPONED Deputies Support Him on Rest of Foreign Policy.

460 to 100.

SENATE AGREES, 249 TO 12

Premier Calls for Accord With Allies to Enforce the Treaty.

Interpellations in both branches of Parliament were designed as traps and might have led to the fall of the Ministry, but Mr. Briand, with his usual facility whenever Washington was mentioned, called attention to the fact that nothing had been decided there and, therefore, he had nothing to add to the discussion which have been credited in France's favor on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the Chamber of Deputies Premier Briand obtained an adjournment of such discussions until, probably, January, by a vote of 469 to 109, with fifty members not voting. In the Senate, however, where opposition is developing owing to Raymond Poincaré's maneuvers against the Briand Government's intentions regarding Angora and budget problems, the Premier found a decided coolness, which he met by boldly defending his established policy of strict accord with France's allies, calling for better support from all parties in order that France might be able to enforce the treaty, which, "in general terms, makes all Germany's guaranty that the reparations will be paid." He got a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, excepting the Washington conference, of 249 to 12.

The Premier commented briefly on the Washington conference, declaring he had gone there chiefly to attest to France's gratitude, and added that after he had explained in a country flooded with anti-French propaganda the truth about France even German-Americans admitted they would support the French. He said that in the event of further German aggression, he would be recognized at Washington that France is not an imperialistic nation, and that a comparatively large army is but a question of security. He said that while some American business men expressed the opinion that large cash payments by Germany would be injurious to the world's finance, none believed that France should stand ruined in the face of an enriched Germany.

Premier Briand called attention to the necessity for solidarity within the country if France was not to give the impression she did not know what she wanted from Germany, but added: "Our allies, however, must be prepared to adapt their special interests to our special preoccupations in arranging Germany's payment." He insisted the Reparation Commission was convinced that if Germany declares a failure it will be merely a fraudulent bankruptcy which the German people would be able to overcome by greater taxation effort, increased production and solid effort to prove their good faith.

The Premier closed his speech with an eloquent appeal to his critics to aid with advice instead of always trying destructive tactics, but, while his remarks were received with much applause, keen students of French politics are commenting on the fact that Briand since his American trip appears to be exceptionally tired, and they are prophesying that if the Chamber debates and the issues raised by the statement by Lord Curzon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the French Government's policy in the Near East become too bitter the Premier will abandon his post rather than carry on a fight against his opponents' pin pricks.

ARMED POSTPONED

Deputies Support Him on Rest of Foreign Policy.

460 to 100.

SENATE AGREES, 249 TO 12

Premier Calls for Accord With Allies to Enforce the Treaty.

Interpellations in both branches of Parliament were designed as traps and might have led to the fall of the Ministry, but Mr. Briand, with his usual facility whenever Washington was mentioned, called attention to the fact that nothing had been decided there and, therefore, he had nothing to add to the discussion which have been credited in France's favor on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the Chamber of Deputies Premier Briand obtained an adjournment of such discussions until, probably, January, by a vote of 469 to 109, with fifty members not voting. In the Senate, however, where opposition is developing owing to Raymond Poincaré's maneuvers against the Briand Government's intentions regarding Angora and budget problems, the Premier found a decided coolness, which he met by boldly defending his established policy of strict accord with France's allies, calling for better support from all parties in order that France might be able to enforce the treaty, which, "in general terms, makes all Germany's guaranty that the reparations will be paid." He got a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, excepting the Washington conference, of 249 to 12.

The Premier commented briefly on the Washington conference, declaring he had gone there chiefly to attest to France's gratitude, and added that after he had explained in a country flooded with anti-French propaganda the truth about France even German-Americans admitted they would support the French. He said that in the event of further German aggression, he would be recognized at Washington that France is not an imperialistic nation, and that a comparatively large army is but a question of security. He said that while some American business men expressed the opinion that large cash payments by Germany would be injurious to the world's finance, none believed that France should stand ruined in the face of an enriched Germany.

Premier Briand called attention to the necessity for solidarity within the country if France was not to give the impression she did not know what she wanted from Germany, but added: "Our allies, however, must be prepared to adapt their special interests to our special preoccupations in arranging Germany's payment." He insisted the Reparation Commission was convinced that if Germany declares a failure it will be merely a fraudulent bankruptcy which the German people would be able to overcome by greater taxation effort, increased production and solid effort to prove their good faith.

The Premier closed his speech with an eloquent appeal to his critics to aid with advice instead of always trying destructive tactics, but, while his remarks were received with much applause, keen students of French politics are commenting on the fact that Briand since his American trip appears to be exceptionally tired, and they are prophesying that if the Chamber debates and the issues raised by the statement by Lord Curzon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the French Government's policy in the Near East become too bitter the Premier will abandon his post rather than carry on a fight against his opponents' pin pricks.

ARMED POSTPONED

Deputies Support Him on Rest of Foreign Policy.

460 to 100.

SENATE AGREES, 249 TO 12

Premier Calls for Accord With Allies to Enforce the Treaty.

Interpellations in both branches of Parliament were designed as traps and might have led to the fall of the Ministry, but Mr. Briand, with his usual facility whenever Washington was mentioned, called attention to the fact that nothing had been decided there and, therefore, he had nothing to add to the discussion which have been credited in France's favor on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the Chamber of Deputies Premier Briand obtained an adjournment of such discussions until, probably, January, by a vote of 469 to 109, with fifty members not voting. In the Senate, however, where opposition is developing owing to Raymond Poincaré's maneuvers against the Briand Government's intentions regarding Angora and budget problems, the Premier found a decided coolness, which he met by boldly defending his established policy of strict accord with France's allies, calling for better support from all parties in order that France might be able to enforce the treaty, which, "in general terms, makes all Germany's guaranty that the reparations will be paid." He got a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, excepting the Washington conference, of 249 to 12.

The Premier commented briefly on the Washington conference, declaring he had gone there chiefly to attest to France's gratitude, and added that after he had explained in a country flooded with anti-French propaganda the truth about France even German-Americans admitted they would support the French. He said that in the event of further German aggression, he would be recognized at Washington that France is not an imperialistic nation, and that a comparatively large army is but a question of security. He said that while some American business men expressed the opinion that large cash payments by Germany would be injurious to the world's finance, none believed that France should stand ruined in the face of an enriched Germany.

Premier Briand called attention to the necessity for solidarity within the country if France was not to give the impression she did not know what she wanted from Germany, but added: "Our allies, however, must be prepared to adapt their special interests to our special preoccupations in arranging Germany's payment." He insisted the Reparation Commission was convinced that if Germany declares a failure it will be merely a fraudulent bankruptcy which the German people would be able to overcome by greater taxation effort, increased production and solid effort to prove their good faith.

The Premier closed his speech with an eloquent appeal to his critics to aid with advice instead of always trying destructive tactics, but, while his remarks were received with much applause, keen students of French politics are commenting on the fact that Briand since his American trip appears to be exceptionally tired, and they are prophesying that if the Chamber debates and the issues raised by the statement by Lord Curzon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the French Government's policy in the Near East become too bitter the Premier will abandon his post rather than carry on a fight against his opponents' pin pricks.

ARMED POSTPONED

Deputies Support Him on Rest of Foreign Policy.

460 to 100.

SENATE AGREES, 249 TO 12

Premier Calls for Accord With Allies to Enforce the Treaty.

Interpellations in both branches of Parliament were designed as traps and might have led to the fall of the Ministry, but Mr. Briand, with his usual facility whenever Washington was mentioned, called attention to the fact that nothing had been decided there and, therefore, he had nothing to add to the discussion which have been credited in France's favor on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the Chamber of Deputies Premier Briand obtained an adjournment of such discussions until, probably, January, by a vote of 469 to 109, with fifty members not voting. In the Senate, however, where opposition is developing owing to Raymond Poincaré's maneuvers against the Briand Government's intentions regarding Angora and budget problems, the Premier found a decided coolness, which he met by boldly defending his established policy of strict accord with France's allies, calling for better support from all parties in order that France might be able to enforce the treaty, which, "in general terms, makes all Germany's guaranty that the reparations will be paid." He got a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, excepting the Washington conference, of 249 to 12.

The Premier commented briefly on the Washington conference, declaring he had gone there chiefly to attest to France's gratitude, and added that after he had explained in a country flooded with anti-French propaganda the truth about France even German-Americans admitted they would support the French. He said that in the event of further German aggression, he would be recognized at Washington that France is not an imperialistic nation, and that a comparatively large army is but a question of security. He said that while some American business men expressed the opinion that large cash payments by Germany would be injurious to the world's finance, none believed that France should stand ruined in the face of an enriched Germany.

Premier Briand called attention to the necessity for solidarity within the country if France was not to give the impression she did not know what she wanted from Germany, but added: "Our allies, however, must be prepared to adapt their special interests to our special preoccupations in arranging Germany's payment." He insisted the Reparation Commission was convinced that if Germany declares a failure it will be merely a fraudulent bankruptcy which the German people would be able to overcome by greater taxation effort, increased production and solid effort to